Note: originally recorded for the BBC Radio Cumbria documentary 'Something to Tell', produced by Northern River Productions, to mark the centenary of Nicholson's birth in 2014.

Broadcaster, writer, critic and Cumbrian, Melvyn Bragg discusses the notion that Nicholson's poetry goes in and out of fashion; the enduring relevance of his writing; his personal liking for aspects of Nicholson's writing; Faber & Faber's apparent reluctance to mark Nicholson's centenary; Nicholson's omission from the Larkin-edited Oxford Book of 20th Century English Verse; Nicholson's work will find its place as a very respectable place in English literature.
